

Falkirk District Stories Screen at Bo'ness Hippodrome

The People's Story Project celebrates local storytellers at its last screening event

An event showcasing voices from all over Falkirk District has been held as 'The People's Story Project' is coming to an end. The digital storytelling project, coordinated by Scottish Book Trust and run by Sabine Hellmann, supported by Falkirk Community Trust's library services, worked with local groups to tell their personal stories, whilst developing important digital skills.

The last Digital Storytelling screening event was held on Tuesday, 27 August at The Hippodrome in Bo'ness. Storytellers from Bo'ness library, Quarrier's young carers, Alzheimer Scotland and Great Place project, FDAMH creative women's group, Forth Valley Recovery Community, TCV – The Conservation Volunteers, Callendar House Storytelling group, Forth Valley Sensory Centre, Albany Court Sheltered Housing, Falkirk Sewing Studio, the Care Words project volunteers, Zetland Park and Jupiter's Our Shed group joined together to celebrate their achievements and share their stories.

Sabine Hellmann inspired residents across the Falkirk area to create digital stories and discover technology in a fun and meaningful way. She delivered digital storytelling sessions to a wide range of groups, including visually impaired participants, volunteers, mental health support groups and local heritage organisations. To date, The People's Story Project has delivered more than 50 workshops to over 100 participants.

Sabine supported the group's attendees to create their own digital stories about personal experiences important to them. Participants used digital technology such as tablets, microphones and editing software to produce a narrated story, accompanied by photographs and/or film footage.

The People's Story Project is part of Scottish Book Trust's national Digital Storytellers in Residence project. All of the stories from the project are available to watch at digital-stories.scot, as well as on the Falkirk People's Story Project channel.

Sabine was supported by Vikki Ring at Falkirk libraries, as well as the wider library staff team. Library staff embraced Sabine's digital storytelling training, and a newly trained staff member now incorporates digital storytelling into her delivery of the Care Words project in Falkirk Care Homes. Kits will also help the project to leave a lasting legacy, allowing digital storytelling to continue within the local community setting.

Marc Lambert, CEO of Scottish Book Trust, said: "Congratulations to all of those who participated in the Digital Storytellers in Residence programme. It's wonderful to see so many local stories from Falkirk documented digitally and shared with the wider community. Sabine has helped to showcase these important voices and experiences, and has also provided necessary training that is sure to have a long-lasting legacy on the library and community as a whole.”

Sabine Hellmann, Falkirk’s Digital Storyteller, said:

“It has been an absolute pleasure working with all the wonderful participants from different walks of life in the Falkirk area. I’ve learned a great deal about local history, astonishing achievements and life’s challenges. The best parts of the project were the moments when stories were shared and connections made, when there was not a dry eye and very proud storytellers. I hope lots more stories will emerge and the skills gained will help participants on their journey using more digital technology!”

Vikki Ring, Development Librarian - Adults at Falkirk Community Trust, said:

“This project has been fascinating to work on, I have learnt so much from Sabine and I have really enjoyed learning the digital storytelling process. The stories that have been produced are so varied and interesting, and it’s great that Sabine has been able to pass on digital skills to so many different groups in the local community.”

Following a successful pilot of the project in 2017, in North Ayrshire and Fife, Scottish Book Trust was funded by the Scottish Government to support Digital Storytelling residencies in five library locations: Leisure and Culture Dundee, East Ayrshire Leisure, Falkirk Community Trust, Inverclyde Libraries, and Orkney Library and Archive.
