Lots of the activities and discussion topics in these teacher's notes are deliberately left open to encourage pupils to develop independent thinking around the book. This will help pupils build confidence in their ability to problem solve as individuals and also as part of a group.

The Front Cover

What do you know already about Anne Frank?

What is she clutching in the cover illustration?

The Blurb

What information do you gather from the blurb?

Anne was a little Jewish girl who was born in Germany. She lived happily with her parents, and her older sister, Margot, in the city of Frankfurt.

Find the city of Frankfurt on a map.

What does the illustration suggest about Anne's family?

Think about why the illustrator may have chosen to work in black and white.

Look at the different textures in the picture. How have these been created?

Who is the focus on in the illustration?

But when she was four, an ugly man with a little black moustache became the leader of her country. His name was Hitler. He hated the Jews and wanted them to disappear.

What do you already know about Hitler?

What can you see on the newspaper? How does this contrast with the rest of the picture?

Create a thought bubble for Anne's father.

Why do you think the illustrator decided to have doves in this picture?

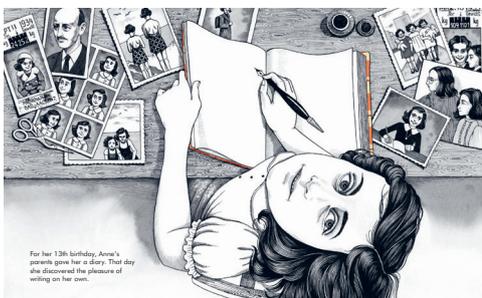

How did Anne's family travel to Holland?

How do you think it would feel to have to move to another country because your way of life is threatened?

Why do you think Jewish children were made to wear stars?

How do you think they felt about this and being moved to separate schools?

How many years have passed since the beginning of this story?

Start to keep a diary. Try to write down at least one thing every day about something that has happened, or something you have thought or felt. You could add pictures – either drawings or photos.

What is an annex?

How would you feel if you had to hide away for an unknown length of time?

Act out this scene in groups of four. Imagine what they might be feeling and saying.
